

What if it's serious?

Suspicious chest pains. A possible broken bone at a ball game. A middle-of-the-night fever that just won't break. The types of sudden injuries and illnesses that cause over 114 million Americans to fill emergency departments annually.

But it's really not a question of how serious something is. The key is how you respond to it. For over 32,000 people every year, that means bringing their loved ones to our Emergency Department.

Here, at Bayshore, 100% of our physicians are board certified in emergency medicine. Every nurse is trained and certified in advanced adult and pediatric cardiac life support and trauma care. We maintain a large pool of specialists, available around the clock, and even have an on-site, emergency helpport. You won't find a more qualified staff or facility anywhere.

The Emergency Department, located at the John Boyd and Kathryn Roberta Mitchell Pavilion at Bayshore Community Hospital, is a serious resource you can always count on.
